

Forecast For London & Southeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 21 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:

Fine, dry with sunny spells. Cold with brisk winds easing.

Today:

Chilly with sunny spells at first, but also isolated showers. Cloud will then thicken from the south into the afternoon, with outbreaks of rain potentially moving into southern coastal parts. Winds easing through the day. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Tonight:

Any evening rain soon easing away to leave clear skies, and light winds. A cold night then follows, with a widespread frost, along with the risk of some icy patches. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Friday:

A largely fine but chilly January day, with some long spells of sunshine and light winds. Likely a little cloudier by the afternoon, but staying dry. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:

Cold weekend with sunny spells, although spells of rain, sleet or brief snow possible, with stronger winds. Clear spells overnight, with frost and icy stretches. Fine, dry but cold Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.